

QUESTION TIME WITH OLIVER

Whether you are a parent, educator, or therapy provider, we know that conversations with our children are important. Questions develop critical and creative thinking, foster emotional growth, and encourage empathy.

Let children know they are in a judgment-free zone, and there are no wrong answers! Pause when they are answering. Listen to what they have to say, and answer any questions they may have for you.

Maybe you discover your child has a fear you didn't know about or that they have a bias you need to address (later). This is a special moment to share anything, and let them know they can talk to you. Don't forget to have fun!

- Who do you know that wears glasses?
- What ideas can you share that may help someone struggling to see something?
- Why do some people with vision loss use a white cane?
- How might someone read if they cannot see?
- If you had a pair of glasses, what would they look like?
